1 General Comments

The OECD data is downloaded via Python using hand-written functions that enable bulk downloads from the OECD's data warehouse. We use the OECD's Revisions Analysis database to source real-time vintages of main economic indicators for 16 countries. In addition, we use data from Business Tendency and Consumer Surveys as well as interest rate data. A detailed summary of all data is given below. The final section summarises all 272 vintage databases of the main economic indicators separately. All data is obtained at monthly frequency.

2 MEI Data

The following table summarises the variables included in the datasets in this paper, compiled from the OECD Revisions Analysis Database.

Data presented as indices uses a base year which changes every 5 years. The relevant timing of OECD base year re-references are:

- Change from 1990=100 to 1995=100 at July 1999 edition.
- Change from 1995=100 to 2000=100 at July 2004 edition.
- Change from 2000=100 to 2005=100 at April 2009 edition.
- Change from 2005=100 to 2010=100 at November 2013 edition.
- Change from 2010=100 to 2015=100 at September 2018 edition.

The data are categorised into (1) Output & Income, (2) Labour Market, (3) Housing, (4) Orders & Inventories, (5) Money & Credit, (6) Interest Rates, (7) Prices, and (8) Stock Markets. And all variables are transformed using first log-differences.
